Dear Dr. Woods:

I have only a bit of information for you. Although Kuta may mean house, family, fort, its exact use with Citra is "wonderful peak" and is so used of the place on the Paisuni river where Rama & Sita spent part of their exile. It may indicate also "a pleasure hill."

Mdaya pur is situated in a small valley surrounded closely by hills. In its centre is an artificial lake. The ramparts are out from the city & command the passes. I have seen the city & have visited its palaces.

My dictionaries do not give the word Laindhana. And I can not trace the numerical signs.

Yours sincerely,
Geo. W. Briggs.

Dear Dr. Briggs:

Many thanks for your letter. I think the name of Citrakuta Udaipur must be its full and official name, though probably never or seldom used in general speaking. If I remember right, there are several Udaipurs in India. All of the numismatic students in India have read that Dusti Landhan as Friend of London. One of the writers lived in Rajputama.

Very truly yours,
